OVERVIEW

Ciera Phung-Marion is an associate in the firm's Commercial Disputes practice group. Prior to joining the firm, Ciera clerked for Judge Erik Price of the Washington Court of Appeals, Division II, where she gained experience in appellate practice judicial decision-making on complex civil and criminal matters. While clerking she drafted opinions for a wide variety of cases including contract disputes, public records act requests, and employment law.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Prior to attending law school, Ciera was a paralegal at an immigration law firm in San Francisco. During law school, was a legal intern with the Federal Trade Commission, where she drafted memoranda regarding federal consumer protection and antitrust litigation. She also worked as a student attorney in the University of Washington's Civil Rights and Justice Clinic, where she provided legal assistance to individuals asserting claims under Section 1983 and Washington's Wrongly Convicted Person's Act.
